Reflection on the Scriptures

"Upon doing this they caught such a great number of fish that their nets were at the breaking point." —Luke 5:6

Jesus called Simon Peter out of his commercial fishing business by giving him the most successful day in its history (Luke 5:10). This is an unusual way to get someone to change jobs. Most people leave things when they're falling apart, not when they're going great. However, Jesus does things differently. He will sometimes make your business prosper if He's calling you out of it.

Notice that Jesus did not call Peter to stop fishing for fish after a whole night of catching nothing. First, Jesus filled two boats full of fish (Luke 5:7) and then called Peter into fishing for men and women. Jesus wants us to obey Him and not just be victims of circumstance. Jesus loves to work through circumstances, but prefers to bless us into doing His will rather than force us. He prefers to move us from good to best rather than from bad to best, although most of us seem to respond more to problems than to God's loving call.

How will you let God work with you? Does something bad have to happen to you before you repent? Do you insist on failing and suffering before learning the hard way? Change your job, life, and lifestyle because the Lord says so and not because you have had enough of the wages of sin (Romans 6:23).
